Abraham Lincoln was a great president but not a very happy man. Aside from dealing with the Civil War, coping with the death of two of his sons, and suffering bouts of depression, he and Mary Lincoln had a very unhealthy relationship. Mary was known to be self-centered, eccentric, prone to outbursts of temper, jealous, and often depressed. Abe would grow silent and distant, take extended trips ...

Yelling rarely produces any good results and almost always results in a loss of respect. So instead of berating students and flying off the handle, try taking a deep breath, getting quiet, then calmly but firmly saying what needs to be said. I talk more about this in my post "Should We Ever Yell at the Kids?"
