Beijing Welcomes You is a street-level introduction to a city that's at once the world's center and its back office, a place where you can feel "on the top of the pile and on the bottom, all at once." Its title comes from the theme song of the 2008 Olympics—a seven-minute, hundred-artist epic that makes Shakira's "Waka Waka" sound like amateur hour—although as Scocca writes, Beijing's welcome is fundamentally an ambivalent one.
