Blade Runner was a departure from normal electronic sci-fi scores - Vangelis concentrated on atmosphere and emotion, avoiding the burbles and wails that cinema audiences had often had to endure. The music was also a technological tour-de-force, drawing on the combined might of the masses of synthesizers and sequencers built up at Vangelis' own ...

Vangelis Blade Runner is An OK Choice of Film Music. This CD has some good tracks but it does not reflect Vangelis' best work. The last piece "Tears in Rain" is the best. Blade Runner's score serves as the heart of the film: it pulses, drones, shimmers and resonates out from the images, sometimes even seeming to have an onscreen source, so in tune is Vangelis with Scott's vision.
