Europe's Utopias of Peace presents a new perspective on the ideological, legal, economic and intellectual conditions that shaped Europe since the 19th century and presents this in a global context. It challenges the conventional narrative on Europe's past as a progressive enlightenment heritage, highlighting the ambiguities of the legacies that pervade the institutional structures of contemporary Europe.

In Chapter Three, Stråth revisits different liberal approaches to the architecture of peace emerging from the Vienna moment of 1815, from ideas of free trade to social imperialism. An account of the Crimean War epitomises the collapse of the post-Napoleonic order 'from without', suggesting that the causes of collapse are external.

Europe's Utopias of Peace (2016) is a product of a major research project carried out at the University of Helsinki and financed by the European Research Council (2009-2014) that Stråth co-directed with Martti Koskeniemi. The aim of the project was to undertake a critical reevaluation of the 19th century in the retrospective view from today's Europe and explore the legacy that it represents today. The book discerns three world wars (1792-1815, 1914-1918, 1939-1945) embedded in deep ...

A utopia (/ j u: ' t ʊ p i ə / yoo-TOH-pee-ə) is an imagined community or society that possesses highly desirable or nearly perfect qualities for its citizens. The term was coined by Sir Thomas More for his 1516 book Utopia, describing a fictional island society in the south Atlantic Ocean off the coast of South America. The opposite of a utopia is a dystopia, which dominates the ...

Utopia - Wikipedia

The Peace of Utrecht is a series of peace treaties signed by the belligerents in the War of the Spanish Succession, in the Dutch city of Utrecht between April 1713 and February 1715. The war involved three contenders for the vacant throne of Spain, and involved much of Europe for over a decade. The main action saw France as the defender of Spain against a multinational coalition.
