In Knitting Nature, Gaughan blends together the natural and artistic world with 39 stunning, fun-to-knit designs for women, men, and children. Among them are a skirt patterned after the hexagonal scales nature has used to cover a domed turtle's shell, a jacket whose collar grows in a spiral—much the same way a ram's horn does—and a tank ...

These gorgeous knitting patterns grew out of a love for nature. Either the colors or the construction of these garments are reminiscent of the natural world. One of the most interesting things that I notice when looking at these patterns is the variety. Though there are some pretty basic ideas behind these patterns, each project is distinct.

How cool is nature? I've always really loved the look of chevrons in handspun yarn. Speargrass is a pattern that really lets the yarn speak for itself. The pattern is easy to remember, and you can see the design unfold before your eyes as you are knitting. This hat can be made using many types of fibres, and look great on either men or women.
