But people, too, are regularly denied the privilege of growing into old age. Without fair and proper access to good healthcare, clean water, nutritious food, unpolluted air, without safety from violence and war, without the support of mental health services and medications, without cures for unusual and fast-moving types of cancer, people regularly die well before their time.

The Privilege of Old Age - ENTROPY
Sometimes those privileges are amazing – the ability to go to school or play on age-based teams and eventually, yes, driving. Of course, with privilege comes responsibility, such as unloading the dishwasher and caring for younger siblings or car maintenance. That can be a bit less exciting, but it's all a part of growing up.

The Privilege of the Grave- and The Voting Booth Posted by Yaacov Ben Moshe Mark Twain wrote The Privilege of the Grave at the age of 69- the same age I am now. I survived a bout with cancer this past spring so I know a bit about having thoughts of the grave. It was Twain's opinion, while a man is living he does not really have free speech. Then he qualifies it. "The living man is not really ...
