The Battle Of Barrosa 1811

The Battle of Barrosa (Chiclana, 5 March 1811, also known as the Battle of Chiclana or Battle of Cerro del Puerco) was part of an unsuccessful manoeuvre by an Anglo-Iberian force to break the French siege of Cádiz during the Peninsular War. During the battle, a single British division defeated two French divisions and captured a regimental eagle.

Battle of Barrosa - Wikipedia

The battle of Barrosa of 5 March 1811 was the end result of one of the most significant attempts made by the garrison of Cadiz to lift the French siege of Cadiz (see Barrosa campaign). That siege had begun in February 1810, at the end of the French conquest of Andalusia. It soon became clear that the French would not be able to capture the city without first winning control of the seas, and by 1810 any chance of that was long over.

Battle of Barrosa 1811 - Over the Hills. A rather fanciful depiction of the Battle of Barrosa by Baron Lejeune, with the British depicted in their much later Belgic Shako, but the view beyond of the coast and the island city of Cadiz in the background really captures the location for the battle. It was way back in March 2015 that we first played Barrosa, a fascinating battle that saw General Sir Thomas Graham avert a potential disaster as the French under Marshal Victor attempted to attack ...
