The handcrafted Italian enduro is rare in general, but VOR bikes are exponentially more rare in the US as very few were imported to American shores. When the EN 400 first went on sale in 2000 it had a price tag of $7,500, making this rare example a pretty sweet deal. This VOR example is plated and street-legal in New Jersey.

2001 VOR 503 mx. Very low time on this bike. I bought it to run GP5 vintage racing then found out it is not legal for my local vintage club because it is a 4 stroke. This bike runs hard and functions perfectly. It has a hydraulic clutch that is butter and the transmission has a Japanese feel to it.

VOR's have some nuts, time kept for a guy this year in an enduro who ran a 503 that ate a rod bearing 3/4 through the race. Thing sounded like a F-ing beast from behind me. He said he had a S/M model at home which dyno'd at 64hp at the rear wheel! That was a pro level S/M bike, reliability was an issue.

I have a 2001 503 enduro, with kick starter. No problems at all, Very reliable quality bike with loads of torque and plenty of top end power, good handling etc.. The first 2002 enduro bikes with electric starter gave problems with the bearings of the crankshaft, the MX models were kickstarter anyway and don't have that problem.
