Book Review of Lamin Sanneh's Whose Religion Is Christianity?

Reading Whose Religion? helped me feel and appreciate the divinely orchestrated, central place of the gospel's transmission - and appropriation - in the course of world history and current events. Sanneh's differentiation between indigenous, pluriform "world Christianity" and western, hegemonic "global Christianity" (22-23, 55, 78, 85) is a distinction that facilitated this ...

Whose Religion Is Christianity? The Gospel beyond the West ...

Sanneh's book title is Whose Religion is Christianity? with the subtitle A Gospel Beyond the West. In the book, he consistently contrasts European-based Western Christianity, seen in the Nicene Creed and theological formulations of faith and imperialistic attitudes towards non-Western peoples with contemporary World Christianity that is based on the thinking and practice of indigenous peoples in the two-thirds world.

Book Review: Lamin Sanneh, "Whose Religion Is Christianity ...

whose religion is christianity? the gospel beyond the west is a short (130 pages) book by lamin sanneh, a gambian theologian/missions writer. sanneh uses an interview/dialogue style through the book (which i confess i didn't like that much as a style) but it does unearth some nuggets. in his interview he explores world christianity, he prefers the term world christianity to global christianity as global is too close to western notions of globalisation.

Jonnybaker: whose religion is christianity?

The respected Lamin Sanneh, a national of Gambia, is D. Willis James professor of missions and world Christianity at Yale Divinity School. Author of several books, Sanneh structures this work as a kind of Anselmic dialogue between the "post-Christian West" and the "post-Western Christianity" emerging in Africa, Asia, and elsewhere. He argues that Christianity's surprising [...]
